ABSTRACT

The enrollment, financial, and academic trends at private black colleges in the early 1970s are compared with those of 1980-81. Data were obtained from the United Negro College Fund (UNCF) Questionnaire, which is sent annually to each member institution, as well as from Scholastic Aptitude Test scores. Specific information is provided on: 1980 enrollments, admissions, high school grade point averages, courses taken in preparation for college, the enrollment of white students on UNCF campuses, male-female ratios, geographical distribution of UNCF students in 1970 and 1980, total faculty, faculty by degree, faculty salaries, total undergraduate and graduate degrees, fields of study, family income of prospective UNCF freshmen, financial aid sources, employment programs for students, institutional and state scholarships, loans, average cost to students, revenues and expenditures of UNCF institutions, and total endowments. Data are provided by specific schools. Among the specific findings are the following: 7.2 percent of blacks enrolled in four-year colleges in 1978 were enrolled in UNCF institutions; total fall 1980 enrollment at UNCF colleges increased 1.7 percent in the past year, from 43,901 in fall 1979 to 44,667 in fall 1980; the median enrollment for UNCF colleges in 1980 was 1,009; and 19 of the 41 UNCF colleges experienced enrollment increases between 1979 and 1980. Introduction

The United Negro College Fund's Annual Statistical Report is a compilation of the most recent statistical information on its forty-one member institutions. All the member institutions are private, accredited predominantly black colleges and universities. Thirty-nine of the member institutions offer baccalaureate programs, while two (Atlanta University and the Interdenominational Theological Center) offer graduate degree studies exclusively. Several of the member institutions, including Fisk, Tuskegee and Xavier, offer graduate programs in addition to their undergraduate curricula.

Public and private historically black colleges (HBC's) constitute fewer than 4% of all institutions of higher education in the United States, yet they enroll 16.5% of all Blacks attending college.[1] Of over 3,000 colleges and universities nationwide, 100 are considered historically black. Of these, 39 are public and 61 are private; 84 are four-year institutions, 16 are two-year. Of the 84 four-year HBC's, 50 are private and 34 are public. Forty-one of the 50 four-year private HBC's are member institutions of the United Negro College Fund.

Total black enrollment in higher education in fall 1978 was 1,055,964, with 173,821 or 16.5% enrolled in HBC's.[2] Two-thirds of Blacks enrolled in HBC's attended public HBC's (115,057), while one-third (58,764) attended private HBC's. Of the 58,764 enrolled in private HBC's in 1978, 44,618 or 75.9% attended United Negro College Fund member institutions.

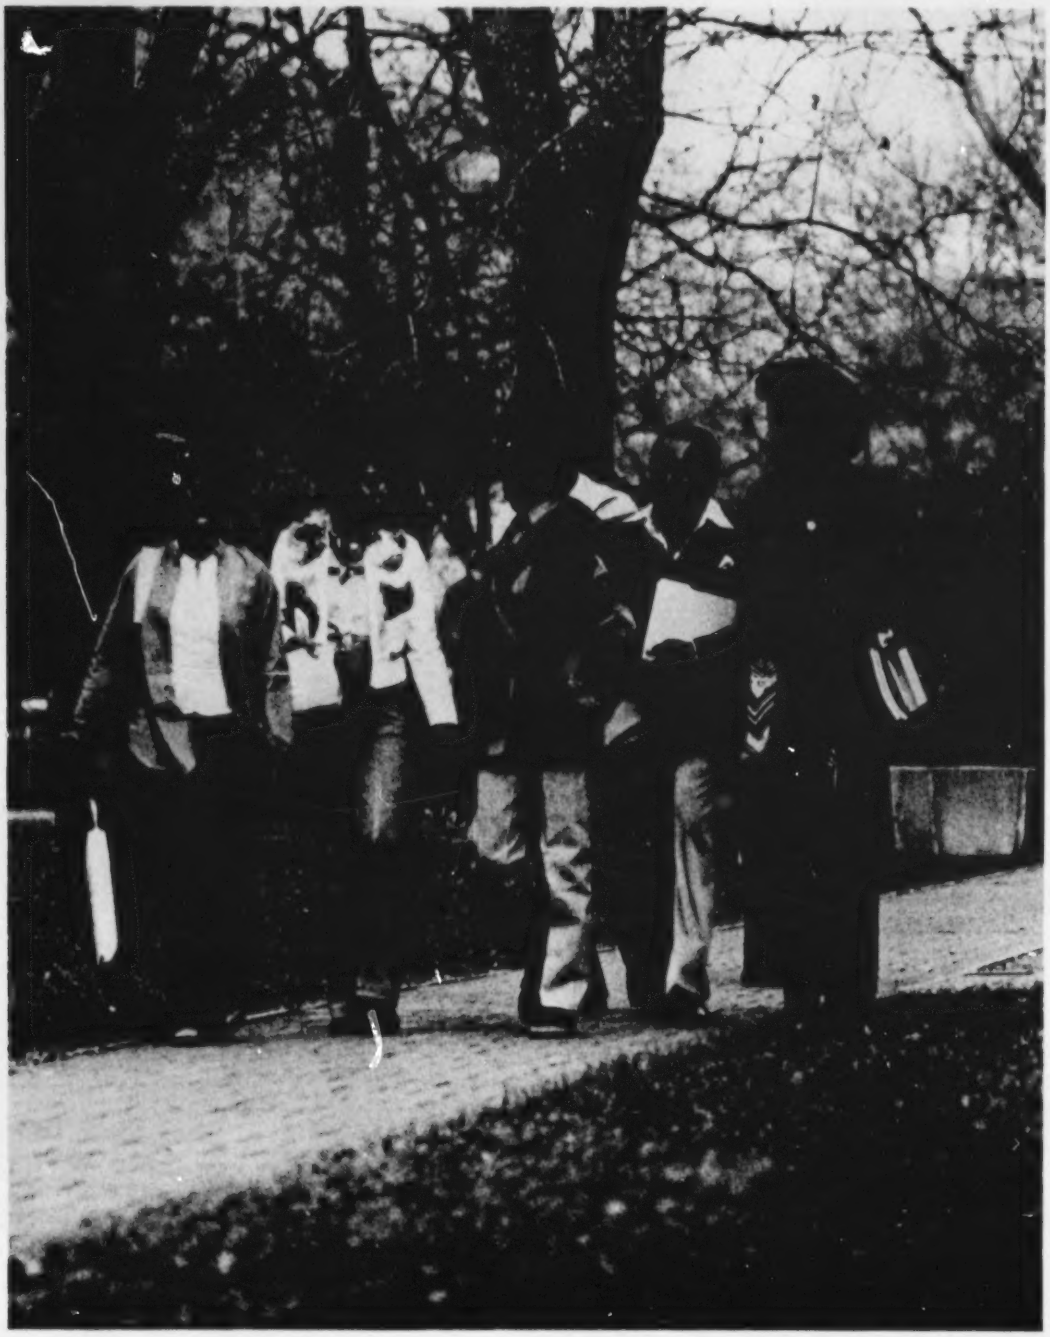
More than 40% (442,617) of Blacks enrolled in higher education in 1978 attended two-year institutions, while 613,237 Blacks attended four-year colleges and universities. With regard to UNCF colleges, 7.2% of Blacks enrolled in four-year colleges in 1978 were enrolled in UNCF institutions.

In recent years, much speculation has taken place regarding the future of private black colleges as increasing numbers of black students have enrolled at predominantly white two- and four-year colleges. One might have expected to find black colleges playing a progressively less significant role in black higher education in the seventies. However, throughout the decade, the private black colleges have continued their long and virtually uninterrupted historical growth. This report compares the enrollment, financial and academic trends at the private black colleges in the early seventies with those of the present.

The forty-one UNCF member institutions have special significance because of their traditional and continuing role in educating minority group students for productive and creative participation in American life. During the past century, the private black colleges have provided education otherwise unavailable to thousands of able and deserving youth. Most of the black leadership in America today is provided by the alumni of these institutions.

Method

The statistical information included was obtained from the UNCF Questionnaire which is sent annually to each of the member institutions, as well as from data supplied by the College Entrance Examination Board on prospective UNCF freshmen who have taken the Scholastic Aptitude Test and requested one or more of their scores be sent to UNCF colleges. Enrollment data used in the report are based on the fall of each academic year to facilitate comparisons with other institutions.



Fall enrollment data exclude summer school students and students who did not enroll until the spring semester. Total enrollment at UNCF institutions, including summer school and additional spring semester students, is approximately 50,000 students.

Enrollment

Enrollment is a sensitive measure of the academic and economic viability of institutions of higher learning. Despite inflation and a decline in the number of college-age people, UNCF institutions continue to grow. The following section highlights the changes in the student population at UNCF colleges.

The 1980 Enrollment

Total fall enrollment at UNCF colleges increased 1.7% in the past year, from 43,901 in fall 1979 to 44,667 in fall 1980 (Appendix A).[1] During the same period at four-year private colleges nationally, enrollment increased only 1.3%.[2]

The 1.7% increase at UNCF colleges represents the underlying slowly upward trend in enrollment at these colleges throughout the seventies. In 1972 (when UNCF membership rose to 41 institutions), the total enrollment was only 40,727, or 8.8% less than the 1980 enrollment.

The median enrollment for UNCF colleges in 1980 was 1,009, a number which has greater significance when viewed in its geographical context. Eighty-five percent of all southern institutions of higher learning enroll fewer than 5,000 students, 41% enroll fewer than 1,000.[3] In size, then, UNCF colleges are typical of the overwhelming majority of colleges throughout the South.

Nineteen of the forty-one UNCF colleges experienced enrollment increases between 1979 and 1980. Thirty-three UNCF colleges reported a preference to enroll additional students, while six stated that they would prefer not to enroll additional students. For those colleges reporting how many additional students they would have liked to accommodate without signficant additions to housing, faculty or classrooms, the median percentage increase desired was 11% and the average was 18% (Appendix B). Nationally, small private colleges which did not enroll their desired number of students would have liked to increase their enrollment by 13%.[4] The larger shortfall at UNCF colleges is probably due to their inability to provide the full financial support needed and requested by their applicants.

Admissions

UNCF institutions experienced a significant increase in the average number of completed applications received, while the average number of admissions offered and new students enrolled remained about the same (Appendix C). Between 1979 and 1980 the mean number of completed applications rose 91.6% from 810 to 888 per UNCF college. On the average, UNCF institutions offered admission to 568 students per college and enrolled 321 new undergraduate students per college in 1980.

The academic ability of students was sustained, and even slightly improved, between fall 1978 and 1980. The percentage of students from the upper tenth of their high school class increased from 15% to 16% during this period, while the percentage of students from the upper half of their high school class rose from 48% to 52% (Appendix D).

Freshman Academic Profile

high school grade point average of 2.77, approximately a B-. Nationally, prospective college students report a B average.[6]

In preparation for college, the average UNCF prospective freshman studied just under four years of high school English (3.86), just over three years of math (3.18), three years of social science, and about a year and a half each of foreign languages, biological sciences and physical sciences (1.49, 1.47, 1.55 respectively). Prospective college students nationally studied foreign languages on an average of two years, and physical science for about one and three quarters years. All other subjects were studied for about the same length of time by both UNCF students and college students nationally.

In the past few years, UNCF students have chosen increasingly to major in business, health professions, and engineering. This year's prospective freshmen continue in that view with their choice of intended majors. Over 28% plan to major in business, 16.1% in the health professions, and 7.8% in engineering. Another 24.0% choose majors in the social sciences and 15.6% choose a major in physical science (6.2% of which is computer science). Four years ago only 16.7% of UNCF prospective freshmen selected business as their probable major, and only 3.9% chose engineering (Appendix E).

The education and career aspirations of the 1980 prospective freshmen are high. Just over twenty-eight percent of them plan to continue their studies to earn an M.A. or M.S., while 21.9% plan to go on to earn a Ph.D. or a professional degree (law, medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine, etc.). In all, 50.2% of prospective UNCF students plan to continue their education beyond the undergraduate degree. Only 42.2% of prospective students nationally share these goals.

White Students

The enrollment of white students on UNCF campuses tends to fluctuate because of the part-time status of many of the students. In 1980, 454 white students were enrolled, compared with 575 in 1979 and 600 in 1978 (Appendix F).

Male-Female

With only slight variation over the past decade, more women than men have attended UNCF colleges. Among undergraduates in 1980, 44% were male, 56% were female, while among graduate students this relationship was almost reversed with 53.2% male and 46.8% female (Appendix H).

Geographical Distribution

The progress made by UNCF colleges in broadening their national and international constituencies held fast during 1980-81. Although only one (Wilberforce University) of the forty-one UNCF colleges is located outside the South, a growing number of UNCF students are from this region (Appendix G). In 1970, three-fourths of UNCF students came from the Southeast, while in 1980, two-thirds of UNCF students were from that region.

Proximity proves a significant factor in students' selection of an institution. Almost 60% of UNCF students are residents in the states where they attend school; 40% are out of state residents (Appendix G).

In the central states region, the greatest number of UNCF students come from Illinois and Michigan, two states which border Ohio where Wilberforce University is located. In all, 2,904 students or 6.5% of the total UNCF enrollment come from these three central states. The New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania tri-state area provides another 7.1% of the students in UNCF colleges. Foreign student enrollment increased from 4.8% in 1979-80 to 5.7% in 1980-81, about the same encouraging margin of increase experienced from 1978-79 to 1979-80.

[1] Fall enrollment data exclude summer school students and students who did not enroll until the spring semester who, if included, would bring the UNCF total to about 50,000.

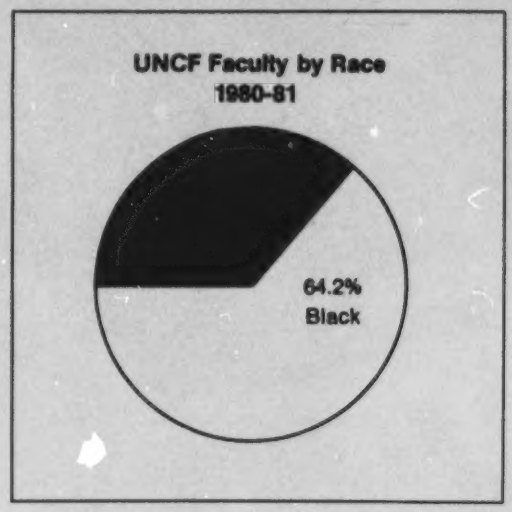
Faculty

Despite growing evidence of increased research at private predominantly black colleges and universities, their unique commitment to teaching requires that these colleges commit a large part of their budgets to personnel costs, particularly faculty salaries. In this section the faculty is analyzed in terms of size, status, degrees held, racial composition, and salaries.

Total Faculty

The total number of full-time equivalent (F.T.E.) faculty in 1980-81 rose to 3,049, a 3.0% increase over the total of 2,961 in 1979-80 (Appendix I). The 3.0% increase in faculty from 1979-80 to 1980-81 corresponds to the 1.7% increase in enrollment over the same time period. This year's UNCF student-faculty ratio of 14.6:1 compared favorably with the national average of 16.0:1 for comparably sized private colleges.[1]

A 7.4% increase in nonblack teaching staff from 1979-80 to 1980-81 accounted for 85.2% of the total increase in faculty (Appendix I). Despite the surge in nonblack faculty growth, 64.2% of the 3,049 teachers at UNCF colleges in 1980-81 are Black, while 35.8% are nonblack. This signifies a 1.5% shift in UNCF faculty racial composition from black to nonblack teachers.



Faculty by Degree

Throughout the 1970's, the quality of the faculty at UNCF colleges has increased significantly. From 1972 to 1980, the percentage of UNCF faculty with doctorates increased from 34.0% to 45.2%. In 1980-81, a total of 13 UNCF colleges boasted teaching staffs with more than half of their faculty holding doctorates (Appendix I).

Percent of UNCF Faculty With Doctorates

Year	Percent Doctorates
1972	34.0%
1974	40.2%
1976	39.1%
1978	40.2%
1980	45.2%

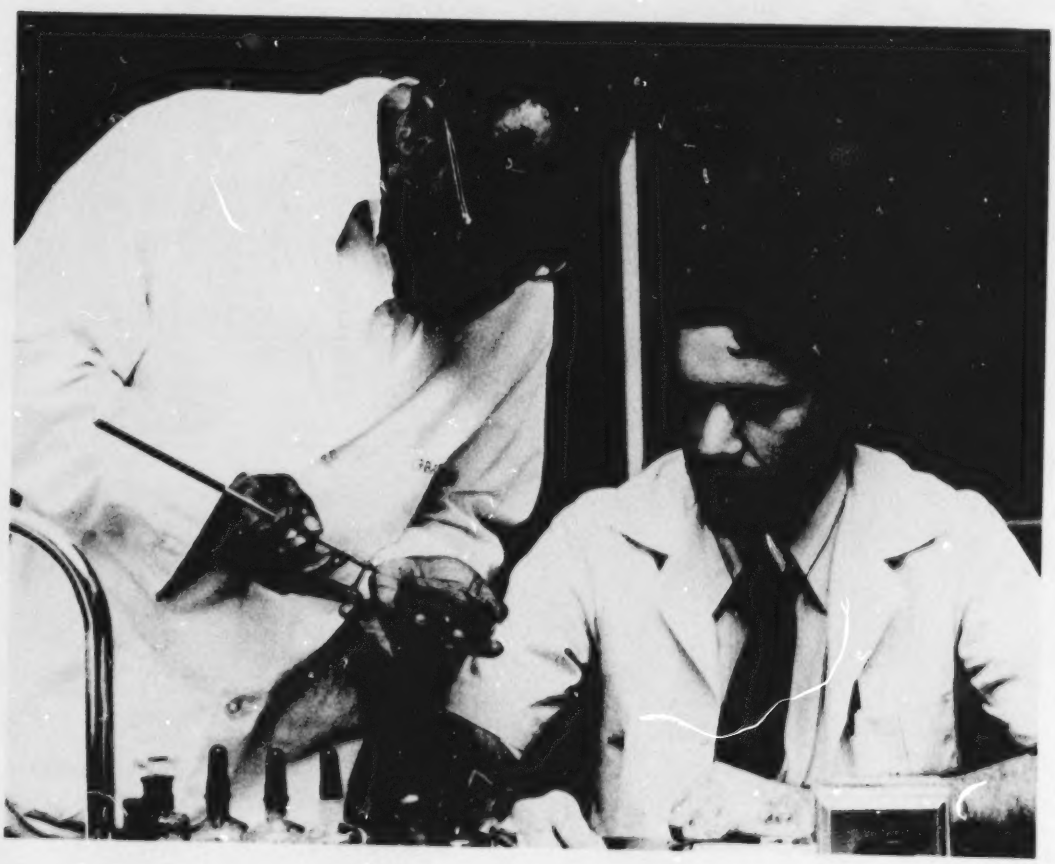
UNCF Faculty Salaries

Rank	1979-80	1980-81	Percent Change
Professor	$17,433	$18,623	+6.8%
Associate Professor	$14,755	$15,988	+8.4%
Assistant Professor	$12,971	$14,215	+9.5%
Instructor	$11,059	$12,167	+10.0%
Average	$14,054	$15,248	8.5%

Faculty Salaries

Faculty salaries underwent substantial increases during the past year with the greatest percentage increase benefiting the lower end of the pay scale (Appendix J).

The percentage pay increases approximately doubled those of the preceding year and far surpassed those of the last six years. Not since 1973-74 has a comparable increase in UNCF faculty salaries been awarded. But this year's pay raise, ranging from 6.8% to 10.0% and averaging 8.5% for all faculty ranks, does not keep pace with last year's 13.5% increase in the Consumer Price Index.[2]

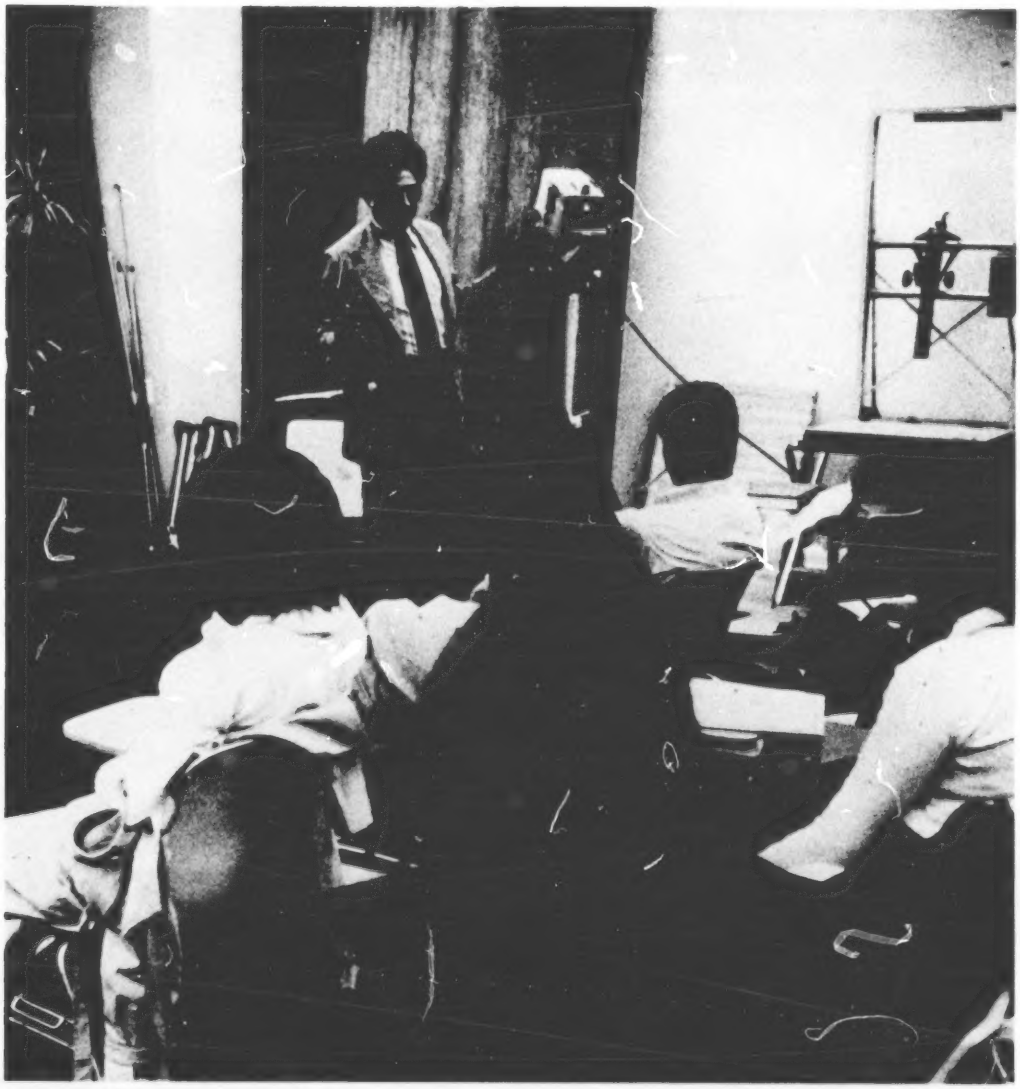


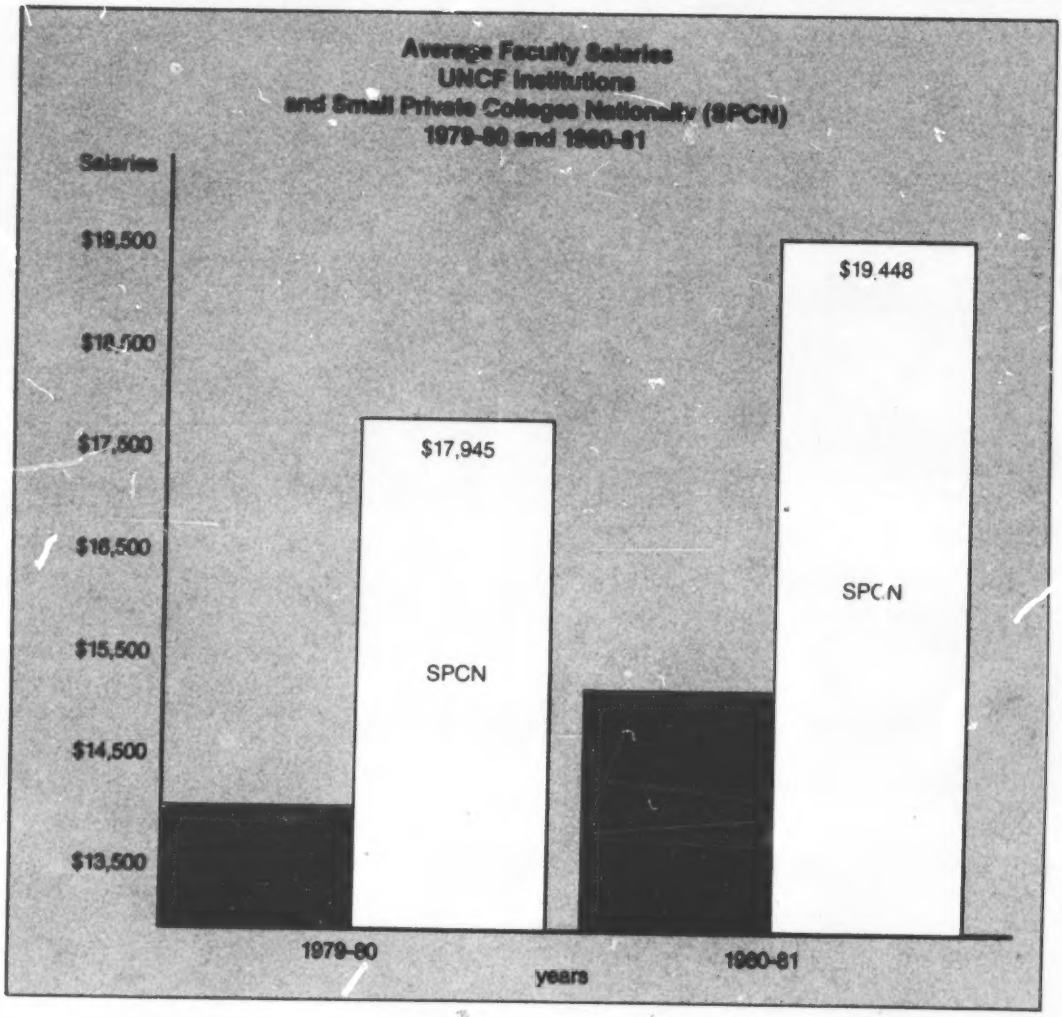
Salaries UNCF and Nationally

Average Faculty Salaries

UNCF Institutions and Small Private Colleges Nationally (SPCN), 1980-81

Rank	UNCF	SPCN[4]	UNCF/SPCN
Professor	$18,623	$27,030	69%
Associate Professor	$15,968	$20,430	78%
Assistant Professor	$14,215	$16,720	85%
Instructor	$12,167	$13,810	88%
Average	$15,248	$19,448	78.4%





Consequently, the purchasing power of UNCF faculty salaries for all ranks combined dropped 5.0% in real terms. These data coincide with faculty salary data nationally where, despite record increases from 1978-79 to 1979-80, "average salaries for all ranks combined dropped by 5.5 percent in real terms."[3]

While UNCF and faculty persons nationally shared the negative impact of inflation, that impact was more severe for UNCF teachers who earned, on an average, 78.4% of what their national counterparts at small private colleges earned in 1980-81. Last year, 1979-80, UNCF faculty earned only 78.3% of faculty salaries nationally. UNCF full professors fall the furthest behind their peers nationally, the former earning only 69% of the earnings of the latter.

Degrees Granted

Total Undergraduate and Graduate Degrees

Following two consecutive years of increases in the number of degrees earned at UNCF colleges, that number declined in 1979-80. In all, 6,744 degrees were awarded in 1980 compared with 7,031 in 1979, a decrease of 4.1% (Appendix K). A decline in earned degrees at UNCF colleges can be viewed, on one hand, as part of a leveling off and gradual decline in earned degrees nationally.[1] On the other hand, because UNCF colleges primarily serve an economically disadvantaged constituency, they are more sensitive to the ills of a troubled economy than small private colleges nationally.

Fields of Study

Specific majors throughout UNCF colleges show encouraging increases. Earned business degrees increased from 1,614 in 1978-79 to 1,633 in 1979-80. The business degree continues to be the most popular degree among UNCF students, making up nearly one-quarter of all earned degrees (Appendix L). The percentage of all earned degrees awarded to students in nursing increased by .5% even though the percentage of degrees awarded to health profession majors in general declined .8% from 5.1% in 1978-79 to 4.3% in 1979-80.

There were significant increases in social science and engineering degrees. Social science degrees went from 1,464 to 1,514 for an increase of 3.4%. In 1978-79 social science degrees were 20.8% of all degrees; in 1979-80 they were 22.4%. The number of engineering degrees awarded increased from 64 in 1978-79 to 79 in 1979-80. Engineering now accounts for 1.2% of all degrees awarded at UNCF institutions.

The percentage of degrees awarded to the traditionally strong education major was down slightly from 20.3% of all earned degrees in 1978-79 to 19.5% in 1979-80. The declining number and percentage of teaching degrees reflects a national decline in the demand for teachers in recent years.

Twenty-six UNCF colleges offer a dual-degree engineering program in conjunction with numerous cooperating engineering institutions (Appendix M). This year, the program has enrolled 1,219 students compared to 956 in 1979-80—an increase of 27.5%. The number of students in their junior year of the program also increased 49.0% from 161 in 1979-80 to 240 in 1980-81. Since its inception in 1967, the dual-degree program has awarded 167 degrees; however, that number will increase substantially when this year's junior class graduates.

The first two years of this decade mark a continued shift away from a handful of traditional fields where Blacks have been overrepresented in the past (majors such as education), toward fields in which they have been severely underrepresented (engineering and business for instance). In response to this change in students' preferences, UNCF colleges will have to continue to expand and create a broad range of majors and curricula in order to satisfy the ever increasing diversity of their students.

Student Finances

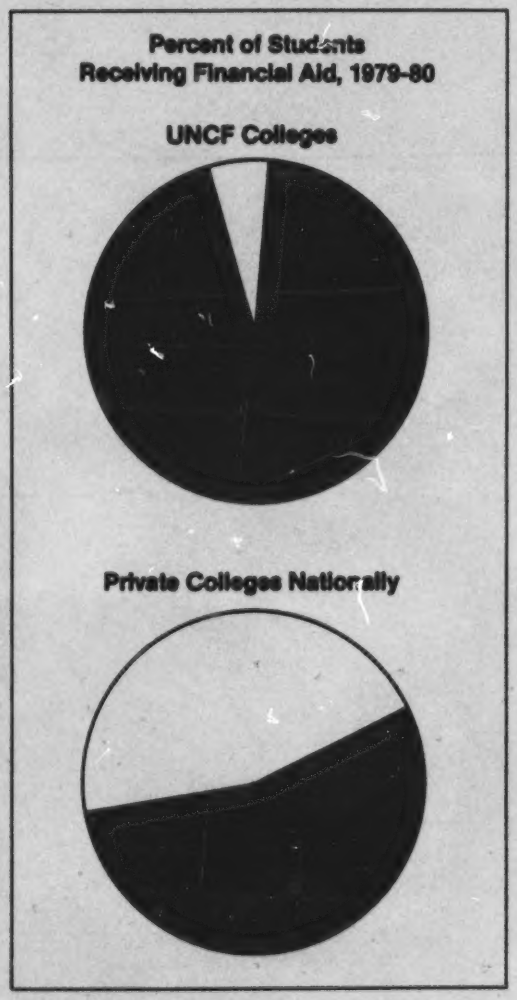
Student Financial Profile

The median income of the average black family in the U.S. in 1979 was only 57% of that of the average white family. In dollar amounts, that is $11,609 per black family compared with $20,438 per white family.[1] Because of this discrepancy, black families tend to have far greater difficulty funding their children's education; and black colleges are far more dependent on the availability of financial aid than are small private colleges nationally.

A profile of 1980 prospective UNCF freshmen shows that 54.1% reported family incomes of under $12,000, while only 18.1% of all college-bound freshmen families fell into that income group.[2] The median family income for prospective UNCF college students was $11,100, or half the $22,200 median income for prospective college students nationally. The median expected parental contribution toward college education for prospective UNCF freshmen, according to the formula of the College Board's College Scholarship Service, was $0 in 1980, compared to a median contribution of $920 for college-bound seniors nationally. In other words, the typical UNCF student required total financial assistance in order to attend college.

Student Financial Aid

It is no surprise, given the student financial aid profile above, that in the fall of 1979, 91% of the students enrolled in UNCF colleges received some form of financial aid (Appendix N). At private four-year colleges nationally, only 51% of the students received financial assistance in 1978-79.[3]



By far, the single greatest financial aid source is the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG) which, in 1979-80, was awarded to 72.0% of all UNCF students (Appendix N). Both the number of students served and the amount of each award increased significantly in 1979-80 over the year before. In all, 32,169 UNCF students received BEOG grants, an increase of 7.8% over 1978-79. Total grants amounted to $45,808,892, an increase of 18.5% over the previous year. Also, individual grants increased by 10.0% to an average $1,424 per grant. BEOG funds provided 42.2% of all financial aid money awarded to UNCF students in 1979-80.

On college campuses, the single largest employment program for students is the College Work-Study Program. After the BEOG, Work-Study assists more UNCF students than any single program. In 1979-80, 46.1% of all UNCF students earned Work-Study money. In all, 20,613 students were employed for a combined annual income of $18,382,694 and an average annual income of $892. These figures represent an increase of 3.4% in the number of students assisted and an 8.9% increase in the individual student's average yearly income. Over half of prospective UNCF freshmen expressed a desire for part-time employment while at college.

Supplementary Educational Opportunity Grants (SEOG) reached 37.4% of UNCF students for a total award of $11,802,304. The 16,687 students who received SEOG money in 1979-80 were, on the average, awarded $707, a 6.2% increase in individual awards over 1978-79.

Institutional and state scholarships were two other important sources of funds for UNCF students. Institutional scholarships totalled $9,393,418; state scholarships equalled $9,654,015. The number of students receiving state scholarships declined by 5.6% from 1978-79 to 1979-80, while the number of students receiving institutional scholarships declined by almost one percent from 8,641 in 1978-79 to 8,572 in 1979-80. While the overall number of students served decreased, the dollar amount of each scholarship increased. Individual awards for state scholarships increased by one percent from $705 to $713 and for institutional scholarships increased 11.6% from $982 to $1,096.

Loans provided another $9 million for UNCF students. The National Direct Student Loan assisted 7,882 students with a total award of $5,146,368. The Guaranteed Higher Education Loan helped another 2,334 students with total funds of $4,139,201. The average award for the NDSL was $653 and for the GHEL was $1,773. Also, Veterans Benefits assisted 590 students with an average award of $1,862.

In all, UNCF students received $108,623,106 in financial aid in 1979-80, an increase of 10.5% over 1978-79. This development parallels a substantial increase in financial aid nationally,[4] but barely keeps pace with double-digit inflation, which was 13.5% in 1980 alone. The increase in financial aid was further offset by a substantial increase in tuition at UNCF colleges.

Average Cost to Students

In order to serve such a large constituency of students from economically disadvantaged backgrounds, UNCF colleges strive to keep tuitions and other costs of a college education low. However, the realities of inflation and institutional costs require that tuitions be increased to some degree. In 1980-81, the average UNCF college tuition was $2,169, an increase of 14.9% over the year before (Appendix O). In 1981-82, tuitions are expected to increase another 10.2% to a projected $2,391. Tuitions at private four-year colleges nationally were $3,279 for 1980-81.[6] UNCF tuitions are only 66.1% of the national average for private four-year colleges.

Room and board increased 6.2% in 1980-81, while the cost of books and supplies increased 18.6%. The total average cost for a year of school at a UNCF college was $3,843, only 66.4% of the $5,791 cost of schooling at private four-year colleges nationally.

Institutional Finances

Revenues and Expenditures

Thirteen, or 32.5%, of the UNCF institutions operated under budget deficits in 1979-80. This is an improvement over 1977-78, in which 40.0% of the colleges reported deficits (Appendix P).

The average expenditures per institution were $7,128,397 in 1979-80 compared to $6,018,590 in 1977-78, an increase of 18.4%. The average revenues per institution were $7,182,675, a 15.8% increase over the $6,201,504 collected in 1977-78. Although average revenues have increased from 1977-78 to 1979-80, they have not kept pace with the increase in average expenditures.

The greatest single expenditure at UNCF institutions in 1979-80 was the cost of instruction (Appendix Q). An average 29% of educational and general expenditures went toward instruction (i.e. teachers' salaries), and another 6% was committed to academic support (supplies and departmental clerical staff).

Institutional support commanded an average 21% of the budgets at UNCF colleges in 1979-80, while the cost of maintenance and plant operations required another 13%. Student services received 11% of all expenditures, and scholarships and fellowships received 12%. Finally, 2% of all outlays went for research while 4% went for community and public service.

On the income side of the ledger, 33% of all educational and general revenues at UNCF institutions were received from tuition and fees (Appendix R). At private colleges nationally, 47% of income came from tuition.[1] UNCF institutions received 26% of their revenues in 1979-80 from federal grants and contracts and 2% from state grants and contracts. The federal government provided 9% of revenues for private colleges nationally in 1978-79. Endowment income (detailed below) provided 4% of the revenues at UNCF colleges and 4.8% of the revenues for private colleges nationally.

Private gifts and grants, though subject to great fluctuations, are an important source of income at UNCF institutions and provide an average 16% of the overall revenues.

Total Endowment

As stated above, endowments provided an average 4% of the revenues at UNCF colleges in 1979-80. After almost a decade of steady growth, total endowments continued to increase, from $131,042,340 in 1978-79 to $132,943,234 in 1979-80 (Appendix S).

With the decreased enrollment at UNCF institutions in 1979-80, the average endowment per student rose 3.1% from $2,937 to $3,028. As recently as 1977-78, UNCF endowment per student was less than half the average for private schools nationally. UNCF colleges' 1979-80 endowments of $3,028 per student were only 52.7% of the national average of $5,741, so the gap in endowments between UNCF and national institutions closed slightly.[2]
